

The thought of a dozen nearby passengers all having loud and annoying cell phone conversations during my five hour flight is appalling. If someone is so important as to not be free of their phones for a couple of hours, they should stay in their office and not travel. Please give some concern for those of us who enjoy our peace and quiet and don't want to share in the personal lives of those about us..... Respectfully, Bennett Gold